The Harbour. The popular and charming seaside resort of Bridlington possesses a small but excellent little harbour, which has, nevertheless, played a considerable part in history. Here, in 1643, landed Henrietta Maria on her return from Holland, and here she was attacked in force by the Parliamentary admiral, Batten. At one time, too, a powerful Augustinian Priory existed in the neighbourhood; it was destroyed at the Dissolution, the beautiful Priory Church being the only remaining relic.
